

Personal Reality

Personal reality refers to your personal experience of reality. It is you experiencing reality from your point of view. Personal reality is reality as seen from your eyes and limited to your realm of experience and distorted by your mental flaws and whatever bad information you believe. It also incorporates an emphasis on the issues that the individual is personally involved in or interested in.

Personal reality recognizes that our perception of the universe is limited. We are not omnipotent and our brains can only handle a limited amount of information. We are also using a brain that is far less perfect than a computer and often gets things wrong. Personal reality is distorted by our own personality as well. However, it is what we have to work with and we have to do the best we can with what we have. Our personal reality is our perspective of {In:The One True Reality} that we are all part of. The Church of Reality is a {In:Monorealistic} religion in that we are all part of the same reality.
